Many Precious Gems In The Form Of Memories Are Found At Waynedale . . First Day

The first bus load of students arrive.

Many view the halls of Waynedale for the first time.

School has begun.

Teachers

Even the teachers clown around at lunchtime.

Classes

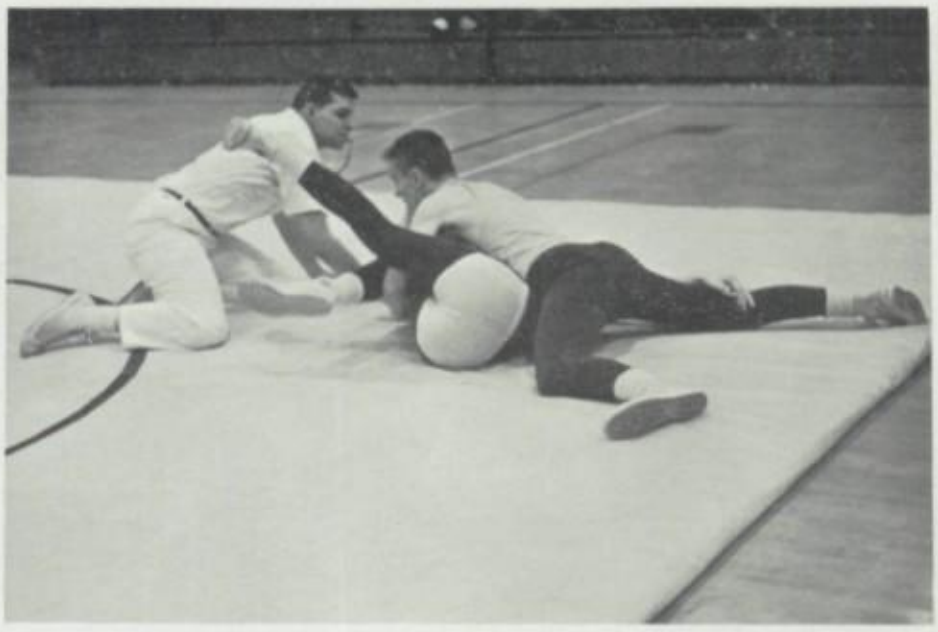
Why are all the girls studying so hard?
No boys, sorry Mr. Fike.

The eye is watching you!

My, this is a studious class.

Athletics

Jeff tries for another two points.



Pin 'em, Vern.

Will it come down?

Friends

We'll never forget the many friendships formed at Waynedale.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY

"Ask not what your country can do for you—
Ask what you can do for your country."

On November 22, 1963, teachers and students were shocked to hear an announcement over the loudspeaker that our President had been shot. Minutes later, we were stunned to hear of his death. In respect for the President, the school was closed November 25, the day of the funeral, so that the student body and the faculty could watch the last rites of a great man.

We and the rest of the nation shall always remember this great American tragedy and the thirty days of mourning which followed.

Faculty

To the members of the graduating class of 1964 I extend my congratulations. You have been striving for twelve years to reach the goal you have obtained. Set other goals for yourself and realize that true value comes from the effort expended in trying for a high goal, not from the accomplishment of an easy task. Set your goals high and continue your effort to reach them.

Good Luck,
Edwin O. Thompson

To the class of 1964:

Congratulations on the successful completion of your course of study at Waynedale High School and on the completion of this yearbook which so well records many of your school experiences.

To be sure, each of you has not worked equally hard to improve yourself academically and socially. Some of you have contributed more to your school program than others. However, the hope is expressed that all of you are fundamentally prepared to accept and deal effectively with the varied challenges which, undoubtedly, must be faced. If you realize that the learning process never ends, that acquired basic skills must be broadened and deepened, and understand with humility that the surface of knowledge has only been touched, then success in future experiences will be more easily grasped.

Best Wishes,
David Enderle
